The Show –

Mary Ann Buenzow a Forester with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources was in to talk about forestry.

She has been with the DNR for 23 years mostly in Rock and Jefferson counties. She works closely with private land owners to make sure their forest land is well maintained. She is available to offer advice on how to “manicure” the forest for best results.

She stated that the two biggest threats to our forest land today are development and invasive plant species. Of the invasive plant species she had samples of the 3 most prolific, Garlic Mustard, Buckthorne and Honeysuckle. Although the Buckthorne and Honeysuckle are still sold at greenhouses as ornamentals they are quite invasive in the wild.

The other issue on the horizon for Wisconsin is the Emerald Ash Borer, a beetle that invades the Ash tree of which Wisconsin is heavy populated.
